SEEK BIDS FOR WORK IN JEFFERSON PARK

There was a regular meeting of the Board of City Councilmen last Monday evening, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

This being the date set for hearing protests on Resolution of Intention No. 35, to do street work, and install sewers and a water system in Jefferson Park and the block below School street, this matter was taken up as the first order of business. The city clerk reported that there had been no protests, and a resolution was passed ordering the clerk to call for bids for April 29, 1929.

The light committee reported that many street lights throughout the district have been out and neglected for some time. The city clerk was instructed to notify the Pacific Gas and Electric Company of this situation.

The absence of a report from the health officer was discussed, and the city clerk was instructed to notify the health officer to meet with the board on Monday evening, April 15, to work out a plan for monthly and annual reports.

The chief of police reported many complaints about some of the merchants on Mission street leaving the sweepings from their stores in the gutter. The chief was instructed to strictly enforce the ordiance covering such action.

The street committee reported a drill by the fire department at the park on Sunday, the object of the drill being to determine the advisability of using hydraulic methods for removing the old stumps and leveling the park. A vote of thanks was given to the fire department for their cooperation and good work.

TWO MEN INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

E. T. Brown, of the U. S. hospital at Palo Alto, while driving a Ford on last Monday night, hit a truck that was parked on Mission street near the county line, the truck being without lights. After his machine struck the truck, Brown evidently lost control of the car, which then struck the fire hydrant on the corner of Templeton avenue and Mission street, breaking the hydrant and causing a great loss of water.

Brown and his passenger, Ted Gillespie, of Willow Road, Redwood City, were both badly hurt. Brown was taken to Dr. Rankin's office, where several stitches were taken in his head above the eye. It was found necessary to take Gillespie to St. Luke's hospital, as he had been rendered unconscious by being forced through the windshield, and was badly lacerated by the broken glass.

The truck, driven by Edon Deuel, of 6085 Miission street, was reported to have no tail-light burning, and the battery disconnected.

After the routine business had been disposed of, the Veterans initiated five new members, Comrades Parminter, Hanley, Fonseca, Viotti, and Fenstermacher.

President Twesten and Past President Shaw are to be complimented on the way they put on the initiation. Owing to the absence of the Marshal, the large rasp that is used to sharpen the goat's horns could not be found, therefore that part of the ceremony had to be omitted.

HOMES OR FACTORIES THE QUESTION AT BURLINGAME

To determine whether residents want the city of Burlingame to be residential or industrial, a public meeting to be held at the city hall on the night of April 17, has been called by Dr. John W. Leggett, chairman of the city planning commission. Partisan feeling on the question evoked by a recent movement to control the waterfront of Burlingame for a possible future harbor, has brought about much heated discussion on whether or not the city shall harbor industries or homes.

Spring Work Gets Its First Setback

WILL RUSH WORK ON JUNIPERO SERRA ROAD

Construction of the Junipero Serra boulevard, new connecting link between the peninsula counties and San Francisco, will begin soon, following word of a $412,000 contract for the highway by the San Francisco board of public works.

Contract for the highway, which will open a new entry into San Francisco, permitting a spread of traffic in the Richmond, Sunset and Golden Gate districts, calls for a roadway 100 feet in width. On top of an eight-inch concrete base will be a three-inch surfacing of asphaltic concrete. Six-foot sidewalks will run on either side, the full length of the roadway.

Assuring a maximum of speed and a minimum of danger for movement of traffic, control signals will be in stalled throughout the entire length of the artery. An ornamental lighting system will add to the beauty of the new highway.

EAGLES CHOOSE DELEGATES TO THEIR STATE CONVENTION

The election of delegates to the convention at Redding, California, was held on Thursday evening, April 4, at a meting of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, Fraternal Order of Eagles, the following members being chosen: James Kennedy, P. G. G. Kunze, Otto Schramm, and Larry Shaw. The alternates selected were E. Nessier, B. G. Kost, H. A. Harper, and Charles Albright. The above named will go as representatives of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, to the state Aerie convention to be held in June.

This meeting was the best attended one for months, there being eighty-two present. James Kennedy received 80 votes out of the 82. It was a good thing that Hoover and Kennedy were not running for president, or Hoover might have lost.

A committee was appointed to conduct the campaign for the election of William Bolger as State Trustee.

The old age pension, for which all the Eagels have been fighting, has been passed by the state legislature of California.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING

"Human nature remains constant, or practically so. The Bible remains the same. Its message, written centuries ago for the people living then, are still vital and just as real messages for the people of today; for you and me. It gives us hope when we are discouraged, strength when we are weak, pure thoughts when we are evil, faith when we doubt, insipratinon and information for sound living all the time."

The Bible is always used in B. Y. P. U. Next Sunday some of its messages which we need will be presented and discussed. All young people are always invited. The meeting is at Calvary Baptist Mission, 5724 Mission street. The time is 6:45 p. m. The meeting is by young people and young people are welcome.

Buck Wilson, a rancher, won't be back in his home town of Winnemucca, Nevada, for at least another month. He was given 30 days in jail and fined $50 at Atherton for reckless driving and being drunk, last Friday night, when he overturned a machine containing three students, backed into an eltctrolier and then sped away.

Despondent because he was ill and could not adequately provide for his wife and seven children, Canut Delgadillo, aged 37, hanged himself at Oakland.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

By the Class in Journalism

The present standing of the teams in the northern division of the peninsula baseball league shows that Jefferson heads the list, having as yet lost no games. Burlingame takes second place, having won twice; San Mateo is third, with South San Francisco in the cellar of the league. Burlingame meets San Mateo today in an important game which will probably affect the present standing of the teams. This game is of considerable importance to Jefferson, because a victory for Burlingame will mean that Jefferson will need to beat only Burlingame to get the championship. If San Mateo wins, Jefferson will have to beat both teams, or end the season with a tie. Jefferson will meet Burlingame next week, and San Mateo the following week. The team is now practicing regularly in preparation for the Burlingame battle, and Coach Edwards is devoting much of the time to batting and fielding experience.

A dance for the benefit of the senior class will be given this coming Friday at the Jefferson Union high school auditorium. Outsiders will need bids in order to obtain admittance, but they have all this week to secure them from students.

On last Tuesday a conference was held in the Merchants' Exchange Building, San Francisco, between the educators of San Mateo county and San Francisco and the committee on a proposed consolidation of San Francisco and San Mateo counties. Jefferson district was represented by Prof. W. J. Savage and Principal James Ferguson. The purpose of the conference was to discuss the educational issues involved in the proposed consolidation of the two counties.

TAKES MEASURES TO CLEAN UP

Students who scatter papers around school will be severely punished, according to a decision by the executive committee at a meeting held last Friday at noon.

The unwanted papers are found everywhere, in locker rooms, bleachers, auditorium, study hall, and even outside of school on the lawns and tennis courts. They give a school a very untidy apearance and give others the impression that the pupils of this school are very sloppy.

Peter Markovich and Martha Johnson were appointed as a committee from the executive committee and two pupils from each class will be chosen to help the committee watch the halls and different other places where papers are carelessly dropped.

This committee of ten in all are to call the attention of any one they see dropping papers and to make them pick it up. If the one who drops it refuses to pick it up, he will later be called to court, and he will be sentenced according to the offense. A sentence which they will probably impose is to make the offender of the law pick up all the papers about the school for one day or more as the offense may be.

"We mean business," declared Paul Williams, chairman of the executive committee.

INCEREASE SIZE OF ANNUAL

Work on the annual is progressing rapidly. Written material is beginning to come in and ads have been coming in so steadily that six more pages have been added to accommodate all the material. It has also been planned to have a larger humor section.

There are ten extra annuals, so anyone who wants a yearbook can still get one, but must sign sometime this week.

Due to the ads and the success of the different whist and dances, there is high expectation that the annual will come out clear.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

ORDER PROTECTION OF PUBLIC CAMP GROUND

Orders will go out to state traffic bureau officers to arrest motorists littering up the county's beauty spots. They will co-operate with fire and game wardens.

Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey said he would post reward for the arrest of offenders. District Attorney Franklin Swart said signs that had already ben erected had been "shot up" with rifles. The letter asking the board for help was from Allen C. Harding, secretary of the club.

A petition signed by 26 residents requested adequate drainage of the Woodside road between El Camino Real and the Alameda de las Pulgas road. In view of the present bad conditions the board ordered County Engineer George Kneese to draw up plans and specifications.

A protest meeting was called for May 6 as a result of a petition for paving of streets in Millbrae Villa Park. Attorney J. E. McCurdy represented the petitioners. The Milbrae school district has agreed to bear part of the cost of paving where the school property is affected.

TAX COLLECTOR McSWEENEY FAVORS NEW TAX MEASURE

County Tax Collector A. McSweeney appeared before the board of supervisors last Monday, asking their endorsement of Assembly Bill No. 1087, introduced by Assemblyman Noyes, which is intended to amend Section 3716 of the Political Code, relating to the operation of taxes as a judgment or lien against property.

The members of the board heartily endorsed the measure.

Assembly Bill 1087 places the limit of thirty-five years over which taxes shall be a lien. This provision seems to be a fair one to deal with the situation, and it is intended to avoid the necessity of the county entering into an agreement with an outside agency to handle these affairs.

In the past few years many of the tax payers of the county have had a rather unpleasant experience in that they have been notified and threatened on numerous occasions that there were some alleged back taxes against their property, running as far back as sevnty years ago. We are under the impression that a time limitation should be fixed with reference to the payment of delinquent taxes, and that the state of California in order to protect any equities they may have proceed at once to quiet title to such property. Hope is expressed for early action on this matter.

Funeral services will be held this Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, from Glad Tidings Temple, 1441 Ellis street, San Francisco. Interment will be at Cypress Lawn cemetery.

FIREMEN'S ANNUAL SHOW TO BE HELD ON APRIL 17

Members of the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department are making extensive preparations for their annual picture and vaudeville show, to be given at the Daly City Theatre on Wednesday evening, April 17. Special vaudeville attractions will be provided and a splendid picture program is assured by the management of the theatre. There will be two performances, at 7 and 9 p. m., and from the expressions heard on the streets, there will be a big crowd at each performance. The firemen know how to prepare an interesting program, and the amusement lovers of Daly City and vicinity are guaranteed a real treat on Wednesday evening, April 17. You are advised to get your tickets as soon as possible.

A LABOR ANALYSIS

The American wage earner's economic status not only remains considerably higher than that of his fellows in foreign countries, but the gap between the American and foreign purchasing power of wages, as measured in the cost of food and shelter, has noticeably widened during the past three years, according to the National Industrial Conference Board.

An analysis of foreign wages and their purchasing power, made by the Conference Board on the basis of data collected by the International Labor Office at Geneva, discloses that the American wage earner in corresponding trades in October, 1928, received "real wages" ranging from one-third to four times higher than workmen in European countries and about one-fifth higher than in Canada.

MAKING MOTOR CARS SAFER

According to the New York Motor News, examination of one insurance company's acident report showed that the two most frequent, serious and costly forms of the 2,400,000 automobile accidents occurring in a given period were collisions with other automobiles and skidding.

Claims for the above causes accounted for a great portion of the money paid out by insurance companies for motor car accidents during the year.

It has been definately determined that clearer vision due to narrower windshield posts and stronger car bodies saves life, limb and damage in motor car accidents. Railroad companies long ago discovered the safety of the all-steel coach for passenger cars. In collisions they do not splinter or catch fire and their use has been a great factor in reducing railroad casulties. The application of the all-steel body to the automobile will be as big a step forward in motor car safety as it was on the railroads.

FACTS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE

New telephone wire, in the United States, is being added at the rate of about 10 miles a minute.

The first telephone exchange in the state of Minnesota was established at St. Paul on February 14, 1879—just fifty years ago.

An average of more than 50,000 local and long distance telephone conversations take place in the United States every minute of the day.

Of the total of about 2,800,000 telephones in the world, approximately 27,800,000, or 85 per cent, can be connected with the Bell system.

Thirty years ago there were 10,613 telephones in the state of Connecticut. Today there are more than twenty-nine times that number—over 300,000.

Waters Not Colored as Indicated by Name

Tourists who have returned with stories of how red was the Red sea and what a lovely coal color was the Black sea should listen to French philologists and historians who have just discovered that the seas in question are neither red nor black. It appears that the word for major in Turkish is the same word as black, according to Dr. Jean Brunhes, member of the institute. Minor and red are also the same word. Furthermore, the maps that Marco Polo used were all marked Major sea and Minor instead of Black sea and Red sea. Of course certain brilliant red fish are netted daily in the Red sea and likewise there is in the water of the Black sea a carboniferous deposit which makes it look a little black. The Turks who gave these seas their names were to a large degree subject to Mongolian or Chinese influence. The old Chinese used to consider black as symbolic of north and red symbolic of south. Except for the fish and the aforesaid deposits, the tourists are not left with a leg to stand on.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK—of colds or grippe—put your system and your blood in order. Build up your health with that splendid herbal tonic, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has stood the test of sixty years of approval. The air we breathe is often full of germs, and if your vitality is low you are an easy mark for colds or pneumonia.

One who has used the "Discovery" writes thus:

Modesto, Calif. "When my daughter, now eleven, was quite young, she was a frail, delicate child and seemed to have a cold or cough. Our family physician, back in Missouri, advised me to give her Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it strengthened her little body and helped her thru that siege. Since that time I have relied upon the 'Discovery' as a tonic and for deep-seated coughs or bronchial irritations and I'm sure there is nothing to equal it."—Mrs. B. T. Kill Devil Hill Shifts

Though the tablet to the first successful flight of an airplane recently unveiled at Kitty Hawk, N. C., is supposed to mark the scene of the Wright brothers notable exploit, Kill Devil hill from which they launched their plane on that memorable day twenty-five years ago has shifted a mile northward from its position at that time The strong sea winds which play over the sand dunes of that region are responsible. However, the site is near enough for the purpose of honoring the cradle of aviation.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Uncle Sam's Warships

United States battleships are named after states, cruisers after cities, destroyers after naval heroes or men who have been conspicuous in naval affairs. Submarines bear numbers and mine sweepers are named after birds. The two ammunition ships of the navy are the Nitro and the Pyro. Some of the more unusual names are the Umpqua, Tillamook, Oglala, Monocacy, Kidder and Koka.

Cotton in Natural Colors

Scientists are experimenting in crossing natural-colored cotton to produce any hue desired. Cotton grown in Egypt has a brownish tint, that from India a gray, that from Peru a reddish shade and that from China is yellow. The plants breed true to type and the colors are fixed and do not change with variations in soil or climate, so that it may be possible to eliminate dyeing.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The housing situation in Lemoore is becoming acute with practically no vacancies and a considerable influx of new families due to Kettleman Hills oil developments.

Allan Keym, 60 year old hermit of Romeland, who is said to have showed his contempt for modern progress by firing on passing motorists, was in jail and his ancient shotgun confiscated. Sheriff Sweeters and his deputies used tear bombs to smoke the recluse from his hut when he barricaded himself against the officers.

Announcement of award of more than $1,000,000 worth of highway contracts, involving fifteen projects, most of them in northern California, has been made by the department of public works. Widening of the Rodeo bridge on the Martinez-Oakland highway, offers for grading 4.4 miles between San Rafael and Alto, and several surfacing contracts on extreme northern California lateral connections are included in the improvements to be started very soon.

Operations for the placing of a rock bulwark or fender about one of the piers of the American Toll Bridge Company's Carquinez Straits bridge is under way. Contractors have already placed a similar fender about pier 1 as a protection for the bridge against marine collision. The work is expected to be completed about April 30.

Construction of a $400,000 clubhouse on the Ocean Boulevard site of the present Elks' Building is planned for this summer by Long Beach Lodge of Elks. The building will be demolished and a beautiful clubhouse will replace it. Architectural details will not be worked out until a financial drive, to be concluded in June, is finished.

An annual membership campaign being conducted by the Porterville Chamber of Commerce has resulted in obtaining more than 250 names and a service fund of about $5700. A few names remain to be procured in the customary follow-up drive.

As a result of the discovery of gas wells north of Watsonville, it is expected that the Pajaro Valley will soon be supplied with natural gas. Pipe lines already are being laid from the wells to Watsonville, Salinas and Monterey.

Redlands people who travel out to Cajon Pass and the desert beyond are taking a new road out from San Bernardino, the Kendall Memorial Highway. Starting at the north end of San Bernardino, the new highway climbs the Shanding hills, then drops down in the valley beyond and takes a direct line for Verdemont. It cuts out four railroad crossings, is of macadam and eliminates several bad curves.

Plans to spread the fame of the High Sierras and make their natural scenic beauties nationally known were revealed by the Chamber of Commerce of Bishop, Cal. Residents of Inyo and Mono counties have organized a non-profit association for the purpose of developing and advertising the scenic wonders and advantages of their country. Plans will be announced later for an active program of development.

It is possible that the Robert E. Lee Military Academy of Santa Monica may choose a location in another section of San Fernando Valley and re-establish the institution at North Hollywood. The academy is young and with a growing enrollment. More spacious quarters are being sought.

The Coast Ice Cream Company's plant at South Gate has been enlarged and the owner, Earl E. McClary, is installing additional machinery. This equipment includes a fifteen ton ice plant, which more than doubles the refrigeration capacity of the plant. Two new 600-gallon pasteurizing vats and other equipment are being added. Last year more than 800 gallons of ice cream were produced daily during the peak of the season.

A plan whereby every automobile operator and chauffeur in the State would receive a printed statement which will show when signed that they agree to hold himself or herself liable for property damage up to $1000, and personal injury up to $5000, resulting from the operation of any motor vehicle by the signees, is now being considered by the Legislature of the State of Maryland. The operator or chauffeur is to be required to sign the statement and return it to the automobile commissioner of the State, according to the bill. The driver would be given thirty days in which to settle in case of an accident. If payment is not made within that time the driver's license would be revoked until financial settlement was effected. The consideration of this proposed measure will be watched with close interest by the Automobile Club of Southern California and other organizations active in motoring law developments.

San Leandro's street plan and home numbering system faces a complete reorganization as result of an ordinance introduced at the last meeting of the city council and which will probably be adopted at an early session. At present visitors, San Leandro residents and the Postal Department are often inconvenienced and confused, it is explained. The original numbering system was inaugurated when San Leandro was a much smaller community, but it has now expanded into a city of many new homes, streets and residential tracts.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. OPPORTUNITY

How often one hears it said, "I could have been as great as he, but I was never given the opportunity." What is this wonderful thing so frequently referred to and to whom is it restricted? Apparently, some believe that it is a gift offered to only a favored few who, immediately upon receiving it, are borne upward by its wonderful qualities to the height of fortune without further effort upon their part. Too often, those imbued with such a belief wait patiently with idle hands, contentedly dreaming of future success, each confident that the god of chance, at whose shrine they worship, will choose him as the recipient of that wonderful gift by which he will be enabled to reach the height of fame. Thus they dream on. Daily tasks, forced upon them through the necessity of living, are lightly regarded, held in contempt, and accomplished with no other thought than to end them in the quickest and easiest way possible. As time goes on and old age creeps upon them, the dreams fade to be replaced by the realization of wasted lives. Embittered, disillusioned, cynical, they cry of the cruelty of fate.

Too late they learned that opportunity is not a gift but the reward of preparation and tireless search; that success is not a certain but only a possible result of opportunity. As a swimmer who has not trained is unable to get out in the channel and forge his way against the current, but must be content to stay near the shore among the driftwood, likewise, the man who has not prepared himself to battle with the current of life must drift aimlessly with his fellow idlers and seek sustenance from the tidbits that come within reach. It is not there that opportunity is found. Those who would grasp it must get out in midstream and have the determination and preparation to battle on up stream where lies the goal towards which it leads. H.

Scientists say that men have a keener sense of smell than women. But their wives are probably not members of the W. C. T. U.

TEACHING SUCCESS

With proper training, anyone of ordinary capacity may become successful, says Roger W. Babson, the eminent business and statistical expert, who believes that success can be taught, just as a trade or profession can be taught.

While he does not believe that success comes as the result of any magic gift, he does suggest a simple fomula, which sounds easy but is sometimes hard to put into practice. It is this: "Do what you don't want to do when you don't want to do it."

In oher words, to be successful one must force himself to do the unpleasant tasks, regardless of the inclination to shirk them. And come to think of it, that seems to just about cover the ground. Put differently, we may say that what is easy to do is hardly worth doing. Therefore we should tackle the hard jobs.

Going farther, Mr. Babson does not believe that the success of one portion of the population depends upon the failures of another portion. He says: "The Russian idea of equality is that all should equally lose; the American idea of equality is that all should equally win."

Mr. Babson is a living illustration of his own creed. An apparently hopeless invalid as a young man, he determined to get well and did. He is now the head of a great statistical organization, with branches in twenty-six cities, and is an officer in numerous large business enterprises. He did the things that were hard to do, many of which he doubtless did not like to do. And thereby won great success.

An American general was reprimanded for giving cigarette testimonials. Mexican rebel generals never tell of their reactions to the blindfold test.

TRAINING A GENIUS

By resisting the temptation to commercialize the musical genius of their child too early, Mr. and Mrs. Moshe Menuhin, of San Francisco, are setting a commendable example, at the same time insuring a more permanent development of the child's artistic talents.

Yehudi Menuhin, their 12-year-old son, is conceded to be the foremost violin prodigy of the present time. When he was 10 years old he won a notable success os a soloist in Paris, and has also appeared with symphony orchestras in San Francisco and New York City. But his parents limit these appearances to one in ten months, and in the meantime he pursues his musical and other studies much the same as any other boy, although he could command high remuneration for continuous concert tours.

In addition to his diligent violin practice, young Menuhin studies piano, harmony and counterpoint, English, French, German, arithmetic and history, under private tutors. Two and a half hours daily are given to out-door recreation, while many phonograph records of symphonies and other classical music are played in the home.

Thus, in patient, common sense fashion, Yehudi Menhuin is being trained to make the most of his wonderful musical gifts, which critics believe will lead him ultimately to a place among the great violinists of all time.

BIRTH OF THE RED CROSS

Its usual prompt and effective relief work in aid of sufferers from recent floods in the South again brings the Red Cross into the public eye most favorably, reminding us of its untiring zeal in the service of stricken humanity.

In contemplating the devotion of this now world-wide agency of mercy, it is not amiss to give a thought to the kindly soul who was its founder, Henri Dunant, a Franco-Swiss business man, born in Geneva in 1828.

Witnessing the sufferings of the wounded after the battle of Solferino, Italy, in 1859, he organized a volunteer nursing service for their relief. For three years thereafter he lectured and wrote of the horrors he had witnessed, traveling about Europe making his plea for an organization to meet such emergencies. Officials of influence were interested and an interantional conference was called at Geneva in 1863, with thirty-six delegates representing fourteen nations and six charitable organizations present. Thus the Red Cross was born.

Henri Dunant lived to the age of 82, by which time he had seen the great organization of which he was the father spread to every civilized nation. Perhaps no man who ever lived contributed more to the cause of humanity than he, and millions yet unborn will be beneficiaries of the noble movement of which his great, sympathetic heart was the inspiration.

THE WAYS OF CROOKS

An interesting sidelight on the ways of professional criminals is given in a recent magazine article by Jack Grey, who declares that cities where these gentry habitually congregate to spend their loot are seldom the scene of their banditry.

He cites the case of Toledo, long known as being unusually free from underworld crime, yet all the time the rendezvous for safe-crackers, hold-up men and other desperate crooks. It was an unwritten law among them that no "jobs" were to be pulled off in Toledo, and although the police knew of their presence, they were not molested, because, as the chief said: "We never bother them, because they never bother us."

Finally a new police commissioner was appointed, and when he learned of the situation he ordered a clean-up. Then, to quote Mr. Grey: "There was retaliation. Safes began to explode like firecrackers on the Fourth. Hold-ups became as common as measles. Cops shot crooks and crooks shot cops. Today Toledo is no longer immune."

One difficulty said to be experienced in catching present-day criminals of the professional class is that many of their old underworld haunts, which were formerly well known to the police, have been broken up. The crooks are scattered throughout the cities, often living in comparative security in high-class neighborhoods. Thus a new and serious complication of the criminal problem has arisen, for which no solution appears to be forthcoming.

A GOOD START

"My dear," said a man to his newly married wife, "where did all those books on astronomy come from? They are not ours."

"A pleasant little surprise for you," responded the wife. "You know, dear, you said this morning that we ought to study astronomy; and so I went to the book store and bought everything I could on the subject."

It was some minutes before he spoke.

"My dear girl," he said slowly, "I never said we must study astronomy; I said we must study economy."—Forbes Magazine.

Some South American tribes believe that moonlight is bad for babies. But what would they say about North American moonshine?

PLANE UNITES FAMILY

Airplanes and radio are pressed into service to perform many unusual services, an instance of which is reported from New Orleans in a story with a happy ending.

When a fruit steamer put into port, Queenie, the cat mascot, went visiting aboard a sister ship lying alongside at the wharf, prolonging her stay until five kittens were born. Leaving them temporarily, she went back to her own ship just as it was about to sail, as it did sail, carrying her without her brood.

Finding the kittens aboard without their mother, an officer of the other ship radioed to the departed vessel at its next port of call, asking that Queenie be sent back by a mail plane then about due to take off. This was done, and mother and babies were reunited.

So, even kittens are sometimes lucky to have been born in an age of radio and airplanes.

THE TARIFF PROBLEM

Readjustment of tariff schedules by the special session of Congress to begin on April 15 may develop into as troublesome a problem as that of farm relief. It appears to be the wish of President Hoover to confine tariff revision to a limited number of schedules, covering commodities which have been affected by new conditions that have arisen since the present law became effective.

But when the question gets under discussion there is no telling where it will lead. Various groups will insist upon changes which affect their particular interests, and there is likely to develop sectional and political squabbles, with all the log-rolling methods usually accompanying tariff revision.

It was to reduce such confusion to a minimum that the flexible provisions of the present law were established, whereby the president is empowered to make tariff changes within certain limits without resorting to Congressional action. In making such changes, he has the advice of the Tariff Commission, which is engaged in a continuous study of tariff matters.

In the opinion of many, the Tariff Commission might well be given greater latitude in the making of tariff changes if it were maintained as a non-partisan body with a long tenure of office for its members, thus removing it as far as possible from the influence of politicians.

The tariff question is properly one of economics and business, rather than party politics, and should be treated as such.

TEN MILES FROM BROADWAY

If a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor is to be believed, one of the most primative settlements in America is only 10 miles from Broadway. It is on what is known as Sour Island, in the Hackensack Meadows of New Jersey.

This settlement, it is said, consists of 32 families, who have up to the present time lived without schools, churches, telephones, movies, running water, sidewalks or any of the conveniences of modern life.

All the inhabitants know of New York city, only 10 miles away, is the nightly glare of the electric lights in the sky. Once in a while some of them visit the nearby village of Secaucus to make a few purchases, but otherwise they are as remote from civilization as though they lived on an island of the South Seas.

Possibly they are as happy as the average New Yorker at that.

NANCE O'NEIL AT THE CURRAN IN "THE HOUSE OF WOMEN"

Nance O'Neil, one of the foremost English speaking actresses of the present-day stage, will be seen as Julia Shane in "The House of Women," dramatized by Louis Bromfield from his famous novel, "The Green Bay Tree," at the Curran Theatre in San Francisco, for a brief engagement beginning Monday, April 15.

Miss O'Neil is one of the pioneers of the realistic school of the drama. Her portrayals of famous roles by the world's great playwrights has won for her lavish praise in many lands and make definite her standing as a star of the first magnitude. In "The House of Women" many critics claim that she is at her best. No less an authority than Dr. Sergei Bertensson, formerly of the Moscow Art Theatre, said: "It is the most impressive acting that I have seen since the days of Bernhardt and Duse." There can be no question but that the role of Julia Shane allows her every oportunity to use every phase of her remarkable histronic ability.

In "The House of Women," which proved a great success at the Maxine Elliott Theatre in New York last season, the author has woven an interesting tale, rich in forceful dialogue, colorful, sharply delineated in its characterizations, describing a family of strongly varying types. No judgment on the characters is passed by Bromfield; no choice made. He leaves them for what they are—no better, no worse—each with their own light of guidance.

The cast supporting Miss O'Neil is an excellent one. Ruth Eldridge, Helen Jerome Eddy, Alma Tell, William Davidson, Marceline Gibson and Theodore Von Eltz.

$100,000 CHECK CROSSES CONTINENT IN 16 MINUTES

It took sixteen minutes the other day for the sum of $100,000 to travel the distance of 3,412 miles.

The transaction took place by telephotograph when Cecil B. De Mille, motion picture producer, transferred a check for $100,000, which he had on deposit at the Bank of America in New York City, to the Bank of Italy National Trust and Savings Association at Los Angeles. In just eight minutes from the time that the check was photographed in Los Angeles and put on the wire, it was received in New York. Eight minutes later after the signature had been identified, the Bank of Italy received a telegram to pay Mr. De Mille the $100,000. Thus by telephotograph service, it can be said that money literally does fly.

FARM ELECTRIFICATION

What will be an interesting series of reports on the progress of rural electrificaion is now being prepared for publication by the national committee on the relation of electricity to agriculture. In these reports the methods employed and the results obtained by various power companies will be described in detail.

The first of the series will cover the activities of the Wisconsin Power & Light Company, while the second will be devoted to the Alabama Power Company, these to be followed by others in turn.

Both of these companies mentioned have been the means of bringing the benefits of electric service to thousands of farmers in their respective states, and this service is being continually extended at a rapid rate.

Rural electrification is yet in its infancy, but is progress since the movement was first started five or six years ago has been most gratifying to the electric companies and the farmers alike. It is relieving the rural population from much of the drudgery which was formerly inseparable from farm life, and seems destined to play a most important part in the solution of the farm problem.

Q. Had you known that this property was to come to you on your uncle's death?

A. It was always understood between us. He had no other heirs. . . .

Q. Had you any previous acquaintance with Mr. Bethel? I mean, before he took your house?

A. None whatever. I never saw him until he came out to take possession. His secretary inspected the house, and negotiations were carried on through my attorney.

Q. In any of your talks with Mr. Bethel, did you gather that he had known Mr. Horace Porter, previous to his death?

A. Never.

Q. When you rented the house, did you retain any keys to it.

A. I have a full set in my possession.

Q. You had access to the house, then?

A. I never used my keys, if that's what you mean.

Q. On the night of the twenty-sixth of July, Mr. Bethel's secretary was attacked outside the kitchen door of the house, and managed to ring the bell before he fell unconscious. Just where were you, Mr. Porter, when that bell rang?

A. The police have my statement as to that. By the sun-dial.

Q. Doctor Hayward was on the road in his car; you were by the sun-dial, close to the house. Yet when he reached you, you had apparently only found this boy. Is that correct?

A. It seems to me that the question there might be, was Hayward on the main road that night, as he says, or nearer to the house than he admits. . . .

Q. You own a boat, I believe?

A. I inherited one with the property. A sloop.

Q. Do you sail the boat yourself?

A. I don't know one end of it from the other. . . .

Q. In your various conversations with Mr. Bethel, did he ever mention the character of the house? By that, I mean any curious quality in the house itself?

A. He recognized such a quality. Yes.

Q. Did he ever mention a letter written by him to a Mr. Cameron, here in the city? A member of the Society for Psychical Research? Relative to the house?

A. Never. But I know of the letter. Cameron sent me word of it a day or so ago.

Q. Are you a believer in spiritualism?

A. I never have been. Recently, however, I—

(Note: Here I caught a warning glance from Halliday and changed what I intended to say.)

Recently I have been trying to preserve an open mind on the subject.

Q. Why recently.

A. For one thing, Mr. Bethel had found the house queer; so had the secretary. . . .

Q. On the day you asked the secretary to luncheon, the intention was to allow Mr. Bethel to go through his room?

A. Bethel? Certainly not.

Q. I shall read you this entry from Gordon's diary (reads): "Porter asked me to lunch today, so B. could go through my room. They left the knife, but at least they know I have it."

A. That's a lie! I asked him to luncheon so Halliday could search his room. It was Halliday who found the knife. You can ask him.

Q. We'll let that go, just now, and come to the night you were found in the house, Mr. Porter, by Mr. Halliday.

A. I wasn't found in the house by Mr. Halliday. We had started for it together. The maid, Annie Cochran, had reported a quarrel between Mr. Bethel and Gordon, and that Gordon had gone away. You must remember that we suspected the boy of being the killer. I was anxious, and went for Halliday.

Q. What time did the maid tell you this?

A. About seven thirty, possibly eight o'clock.

Q. And when did you go for Mr. Halliday?

A. It was about eleven, I imagine.

Q. What did you do in the interval?

A. She was nervous, and I took her home. After that we had callers.

Q. Did you see Mr. Bethel, in that interval?

A. No.

Q. Had it occurred to you that Gordon might be going to see the police?

A. I never thought of it. Why should he be going to the police?

Q. Did Mr. Bethel think of it?

A. I've told you; I didn't see him.

Q. On the night of the murder in the house at Twin Hollows, what led you to your discovery of the crime?

A. My wife heard the telephone ring, and I went to it. All three buildings are on one line, and the receiver at the main house was down. I heard a crash, and heavy breathing near the telephone.

Q. That made you suspicious?

A. I had been expecting trouble between Mr. Bethel and Gordon.

Q. Why did you expect trouble?

A. I knew they had quarreled. Mr Bethel had told me that it was he who had struck Gordon, mistaking him for a burglar, and that Gordon suspected it.

Q. When did he tell you that?

A. I don't know exactly. About three days before the murder, I think.

Q. Can you remember the burden of that conversation?

A. Very well. He said that he was suspicious of the boy; that he was weak and vicious, and possibly criminal. He knew he was going out at night. On the night of the twenty-sixth of July Gordon was out, and he dragged himself downstairs. When he heard him at the kitchen door he struck him. But he maintained that he had not tied him. I believe that, personally. He had one useless hand.

Q. Did you ever have any reason to believe that Mr. Bethel exaggerated his infirmity?

A. Exaggerated it? What do you mean?

Q. You believe he was as helpless as he appeared?

A. I can't imagine a man assuming such a thing.

Q. Now, Mr. Porter, you have said that the telephone receiver at the main house was down, and you heard over it enough to alarm you?

A. Yes.

Q. It rang, and you went to it?

A. Yes.

Q. How could it ring, if the other receiver was down?

A. As a matter of fact, I didn't hear it. My wife said it had rung, and to satisfy her I went to it.

Q. Did the secretary, Gordon ever approach you on a matter of money?

A. Money? I don't understand the question.

Q. Did he ever ask you for money? Or intimate that he needed it?

A. Never. He said something once about giving up his position. . .

Q. Where was he, the night you held the conversation with Mr. Bethel, relative to him?

A. Here in the city, I believe.

Q. And Mr. Bethel thought he might have gone to the police.

A. That's the second time you have intimated that Gordon had something to tell the police. I can't talk in the dark like this. If anybody wanted to avoid the police, it was this boy. .

Q. I am going back to the night Mr. Halliday found you in the house—

A. He didn't find me. We had started there together.

Q. You say you saw a figure at the foot of the stairs, and fired at it?

A. I didn't intend to fire.

Q. You didn't recognize this figure?

A. No.

Q. It was not Mr. Bethel?

A. Bethel? No. He was locked in his room. . . .

Q. You say you are not a spiritualist?

A. Certainly not.

Q. You have never made any experiments in spiritualism?

A. I have been present at one or two seances.

Q. When? Recently?

A. We have held two sittings in the main house within the last few days.

Q. When did you first hear of the symbol of a triangle inside a circle?

A. If you mean in connection with the crimes—

Q. Before that. You told Mr. Greenough, some time ago, that you heard of it in some other connection.

A. I told him I had happened on it in an old book on Black Magic, and told a group of women about it. It was a purely facetious remark.

Q. Can you account for its use in connection with these crimes?

A. I have no official knowledge that it was used in connection with the crimes. Only with the sheep-killing?

Q. But you know it was so used?

A. I know that it was used once when Mr. Greenough did not find it.

Q. Where was that?

A. On a tree near where the Morrison truck was discovered. I have heard it was on Carroway's boat, but I don't know that. I know it was deliberately put on my car, after Mr. Halliday was hurt.

Q. You say, put on the car? Do you mean by that, Mr. Bethel did it?

A. Bethel? How could he? We have thought lately that Gordon was responsible. We found a piece of his cipher nearby.

Q. You have felt all along that Gordon was guilty?

A. I won't say that. I would say that the burden of the evidence indicated that he was guilty. Mr. Halliday has had considerable doubt of his guilt.

Q. Have you ever considered that it might be Bethel who killed Gordon?

A. Never. He couldn't have done it.

Q. But if he had had assistance?

A. Are you telling me that Bethel did kill Gordon?

Q. I am telling you that somebody killed Gordon, Mr. Porter. His body was washed ashore at Bass cove this morning.

September 7.

Halliday has saved me from arrest, by giving to the police the information which he has been gathering on the case all summer. Has made a quiet gesture, which is like him, and given me back to life, liberty and the pursuit of literature.

He came out late last night, and I understand is still asleep. He has had very little sleep, poor lad, for a long time.

I myself collapsed this morning, and Hayward has put me back to bed. Edith, spreading my coverings neatly before Greenough came up, says I am now so thin that:

"You really make a hollow, William. If it were not for your feet, nobody would know you are there!" . . .

It is impossible to record in detail my conversation this afternoon with Greenough, covering as it did more than an hour. He came in, I thought, slightly uncomfortable and perhaps a little crestfallen, and I motioned him to a chair. He sat down and mopped his face with his handkerchief, and after that stooped and rather deliberately wiped his shoes with it. Then he straightened and looked at me.

"Well, professor," he said. "it's a darned queer world, there's no denying it."

"The world's all right. It's the people who mess things up."

"Like fleas on a dog," was his rather abstracted comment. He felt in his pocket, with much the same gesture as on that early visit of his when he had drawn the triangle within the circle on the back of an old envelope. Whether the movement was reminiscent to him, as it was to me, I cannot say. But he glanced at me quickly and then smiled.

"Sort of had me going, you did, there for a while!" he said. "But I was getting pretty close to the facts before this diary came along. Of course, it helped."

Dared Bethel to Discharge Him.

He had Gordon's diary in his hand. "Naturally," he said, fingering the book, "your young friend's information was valuable; I'm not discounting that. The hand-print on the window board, for instance. I'd have found it sooner or later, but it saved time. And the young lady, too. She's done her bit, all right. I've been handicapped by being too well known around here. And Starr's a fool."

He snapped out this last statement, and I gathered that he was still smarting under the knowledge that, without Halliday and Edith, he would still be nowhere. It was, more or less, his defense.

"Of course," he said, "ever since we got hold of this diary of Gordon's, one thing's been pretty clear. Bethel wasn't working alone. According to what I saw of him it wasn't possible. He couldn't even have made a getaway without help. The only question was, who'd helped him."

"So you picked on me?"

"Well," he said wryly, "you'll have to admit that you've seemed to go out of your way all summer to get into trouble! As a matter of fact, I didn't pick on you; it was Gordon." He looked at my clock.

"I've only got an hour," he said. "Your niece is sitting on the stairs now, holding a stop-watch on me. I can't read you this thing, but I can tell you what's in it. And believe me, that's plenty." . . .

Briefly, then, the deciphering of the diary had left me in a very bad position. When they had finished it, it was Benchley's idea to arrest me at once. They had the boy's body, a fact they had kept to themselves, and I was within an ace of a charge of murder.

But Halliday had stayed.

"He seemed to feel there was trouble coming," Greenough said. "He hung around and drove us all crazy. He insisted, as he'd brought the key, on his right to read the stuff as it came through; and as it went on, he didn't know exactly what to do.

"Finally, seeing what was in the air, he made a trade with us. He was willing to have you brought in and interrogated, but on condition that if you weren't held he'd come over with something of his own. You get the point, of course. There's a reward involved, and he'd been holding out on us a bit." He waved his hand. "That's natural. We don't hold it against him. But the point is, he made his trade."

Coming to my examination, my answers had apparently impressed Hemingway satisfactorily. On the other hand, added to the diary's constant suspicion of me, was Greenough's own case against me. He passed over that rather airily.

"I wasn't trying to make out a case against you," he said. "As a matter of fact, you couldn't have been the man who attacked Halliday. You weren't here."

"Naturally," I agreed, gravely. "I wasn't here. Of course, if I had been here—!"

He glanced at me quickly, but went back to the night of the inquiry.

"The question was, whether to hold you or not. You may remember Hemingway going out, when it was over, and talking to Halliday outside? Well, it was then he made the trade."

Apparently the fact that Gordon had been the victim had not been the surprise to the police that it had been to me. For one thing, the microscope had shown one detail which the detective had not mentioned to me at the time. Caught between the handle of the knife and the blade had been a short piece of hair. The microscope showed this hair not only young, a matter readily determined, and the approximate color of Gordon's; it also showed it liberally coated with pomade. Poor Gordon's glistening, varnished hair!

But Greenough had been inclined at first to think that there had been two victims, instead of one.

"Dying and passing on," he says, "is not like taking your thumb out of a bowl of soup. It's bound to leave some sort of a hole."

And there had been no hole. If Bethel had died and passed on, no one apparently missed him. As time went on and no queries were received, the thing began to look ominous; as though Bethel himself had been hiding away, under an assumed name.

The idea that Bethel had had an enemy from whom he was hiding, and who had found him, began to intrude itself.

"But," he said, with engaging frankness, "that eliminated you. And you wouldn't be eliminated. You were like some people you've seen, when there's a camera man about; always getting in front of the machine and into the picture."

Then came the diary, and Gordon brought me in unmistakably, and in a way they had not thought of. Not an enemy, but an accomplice; Bethel hiding there, with my connivance, and the two of us, he the brains presumably and I the hands, working out between us some sinister design which even the boy could not understand.

"Whatever it is," Gordon had written, shortly after the Morrison girl's disappearance, "he's got outside help." And he wonders if I am guilty. But he is not sure of that; he even suspects Bethel, in one entry, of being less helpless than he appeared, and possibly of "working on his own." He abandoned that idea, however, and there was a time when he suspected Thomas; even a time when he thought of bringing his suspicions to me.

But Bethel was beginning to be afraid of him. He thinks Bethel knows he has discovered the boat. He grows alarmed, and buys a knife; he records that "he can take care of himself." But there is bravado in it. Later on, he finds that he is occasionally stealthily locked in at night, for three or four hours, and he buys a rope and hides it in his room. After that matters moved rapidly.

He found the gun-room window unlocked on certain nights, and set a watch on it. And on one such night Bethel tried to kill him.

"He tried to kill me last night," he writes on the 27th of July, and goes on to say that Bethel couldn't have tied him, and that "maybe it was Porter." From that time on he suspected me.

And Bethel was watching him. Nothing is so dramatic in all the diary as the situation unconsciously revealed between the paralytic and the boy; each watching the other, the guard up between them, while the servant is in the room, and then down again. The boy recklessly mocking, the old man grim and waiting.

And nothing said. The boy goes to the city and tries to buy a revolver, but there is a new law in effect, and he fails. He has the knife, and has to trust to that. He thinks of going to the police while he is in the city; the reward would be a big thing. He says: "I could go around the world on ten thousand." But his case isn't complete; he needs the outside man. He suspects me, but he "hasn't the goods" on me.

And there are times when he admits the possibility that I may not be the outside man. One night he hears the unknown in the house. There is a reddish glare and he sees a figure steal into the den. But it "did not look like Porter." And he is more puzzled than ever, for Bethel is in his room, asleep, and although the boy camps on the stairs until daylight, he does not see the figure again.

"At daylight examined den and library. All windows closed and locked. It beats me."

It is about this time, too, that he begins to believe that Bethel is not only watching him, but that he is expecting trouble from some other source. He tells Bethel he has seen a figure go into the den at night, and Bethel shows alarm.

"He and the other one have quarreled," he says. "And B.'s afraid of him."

But on the night when he came home, to find Starr, Halliday and myself in the house, his suspicions of me returned in full force. He decides that Bethel and I have had a quarrel, and that one of us has tried to shoot the other! But his knife has been taken; he steals one from the kitchen and carefully sharpens it; but he is not so frightened as he has been. Bethel and I have quarreled, and he "can handle the old man."

But matters were rapidly approaching a climax. Bethel was going to give up the house and let him go. He seems to have dared Bethel to discharge him, and to have more than hinted at what he suspects.

"I can talk for ten thousand," he writes, "or keep quiet for twenty. He can take his choice."

He has the upper hand, now. The other man is no longer in evidence; they have apparently quarreled, and Bethel is left to bear the situation alone. The boy lays various traps, but no one enters the house. "The murder pact" is broken, and the old man sits in his chair and broods.

"Blackmail is an ugly word," he says once.

"Not half so ugly as murder," retorts Gordon, and notes it with satisfaction in his diary.

"Murder" was the last word he wrote there. . . .

But, for all his apparent frankness, Greenough's errand was clearly only to relieve my anxieties concerning myself. He refused all further information.

"We have a suspect, all right," he said. "I don't mind saying that. But we haven't a case yet, and it's touch and go whether we get one. Until we do, we're not talking."

September 8.

Halliday's attitude is very curious. He is taciturn in the extreme; he avoids any confidential talks with me, and Jane commented on it this morning.

"He worries me," she said, "and he is worrying Edith. If you go out now and look, you'll see him pacing the boathouse veranda, and he has been doing it for the last hour."

I admit that he puzzles me. It was Greenough's errand, so far as I can make out, to relieve my mind as to myself, but to treat Halliday's case, as given to the police, as entirely confidential.

"It's the outside man we are after," he said; "and the outside man we are going to get."

But on my mentioning my right to know who was under suspicion, he only repeated what the detective had said.

"You understand," he said, "there's no case in law yet. Knowing who did a thing, and proving who did it, are different things entirely."

Elephant Supreme in Rulership of Jungle

Elephants are found nearly everywhere in Indo-China except in Tonking. They are similar to the Indian elephants, and although they have been divided into several subspecies on very slender ground, they all belong to the same race: Elephas maximus.

Not so tall as their African cousins, but very nearly as big, they differ from the latter by a good number of points, "F. J." says, writing in the Atlantic Monthly. Their ears are much smaller and differently shaped. Their trunk is absolutely flexible and not made of numerous segments, but rather like a big rubber tube with only one fingerlike proboscis at the tip. Their back is convex from the shoulders to the root of the tail and their forehead is slightly concave. Also the brain capacity is larger than in the African species, thus making the head shot far more deadly. An Asiatic elephant charging is easily stopped with a bullet in the forehead.

To my mind, the elephant deserves the name of King of Beasts more than does the lion or the tiger. He fears only man, and that not always. He is the unchallenged master of the jungle and, confident in his enormous strength, leads among its denizens a peaceful existence, fearing none and attacking none.

Lacquered Silver

The bureau of standards says that the lacquer on sterling silver, when it is wearing off, should be removed by a solvent, such as a lacquer thinner or butyl acetate. If the objects are discolored, they should be cleaned with a silver cleaner and washed and dried carefully, avoiding finger marks on the surface. The silver may then be relacquered with a clear lacquer for silverware sold by most lacquer manufacturers. After lacquering the objects should be dried at 100 to 120 degrees Fahrenheit for 30-45 minutes. Time and money might be saved by taking the articles to an electroplating plant or to a jeweler.

Right Sorrow

What do you allow yourself to grieve over? Do you indulge yourself in sorrow over what cannot be helped? Are you saddened more by a harsh word from another than by a harsh word you yourself utter? Much success and happiness depend on being sorry for the right things.—Exchange

It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless. SIDELIGHTS

Records of the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, away back in 1802, disclose that "a plan for Muscle Shoals" was discussed in that early day. And it appears that the discussion may continue for some time to come.

Einstein is said to have given a more easily understood illustration of his theory of relativity, as follows: "When you sit with a nice girl for two hours you think it's only a minute—but when you sit on a hot stove for a minute you think it is two hours."

Rev. J. B. Bruner, of Atlantic, Iowa, declares that his pet rabbits eat the new paper made of cornstalk in preference to any other food. If its use becomes general we may find a way to make a dinner for the whole family from the Sunday newspaper.

Pilot Emil Burgin of Curtiss Field, Long Island, is one of those daring spirits who will try anything twice. Attempting a take-off in a monoplane, a gust of wind caught the wings and turned the machine upside down on the field. Uninjured, Burgin tried again in another plane with the same result. Still unhurt, Burgin called it a day and went home.

Misguided religious zeal has often led to disastrous results, a recent instance being the case of Lloyd Linton, of Hot Springs, S. D., who imagined that his right hand had offended him. A whirling blade in his brother's sawmill suggested a way of obeying the biblical injunction, which he proceeded to do, saying afterward: "So I cut it off and prayed to God not to let it bleed much, and it didn't."

With so many government inspectors and other officials snooping about it is comparatively easy for an imposter to get in his work. In Nashville, a bandit armed with a fake search warrant robbed two homes to which he had been admitted, obtaining about $6,000.

The recent census taken in Marash, Turkey, brought about an amusing episode. Through mistake the census takers put down the name of a camel, Haroun Kaha, who was summoned for jury duty and was taken to court by his owner.

Opportunity knocks but once, according to the famous Ingalls poem, and when it knocked at the door of L. M. Newgrass, of Chicago, a year ago, he didn't recognize it. He was offered the racer Golden Prince for $3,000, but turned the offer down. A few days ago Golden Prince won the $98,000 handicap at Tijuana.

An eminent spiritualist reports further communication with spirits of the departed, including his late wife, who is said to have given him "a characteristic message." Probably reminded him to wind the clock and put the cat out, or something like that.

Quite a commotion has been aroused over the system whereby secret agents of the Department of Justice are placed in federal prisons by means of fake commitment papers, so that they may spy upon inmates and officials, including the wardens. Which reminds us of the large mouthful said by Senator Reed of Missouri, who declared that a spy "is unquestionably the lowest order of animal life."

Add to the list of peace-time heroes Ralph Snodgrass, aged 18, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who has undergone forty-seven operations and has finally recovered from a bone infection from which he suffered for six years. In spite of this, he is only one year behind in his school grades, and will study surgery in the hope of aiding other unfortunates.

Louis Orefice, of New York, is free after being found guilty of beating his wife, having paid the penalty imposed by the judge, who sentenced him to kiss his wife and mother-in-law. He took his medicine cheerfully, without invoking the constitution protection agains cruel and unusual punishments.

David G. Wilson, of Summerville, N. Y., was not a lover of dogs, nor did he own one, but returning home one night recently he found thirteen of them in his room to greet him with grateful tail wags and other manifestations of joy. A window had been left open and the dogs had entered to escape the cold.

Future professors at the University of Georgia yet unborn will benefit by a bequest of $7,000 made to that institution in 1842 by Charles McCoy, who provided that the sum should draw interest and be untouched until 1975. The fund has now grown to $110,000, and will reach a million by the time it is available for use.

Although his life was apparently one long effort to escape old age, Guglielmo Farni died of it in Port Hope, Ontario, recently in his ninety-first year. Among the exploits in which he flirted with death were several performed over Niagara Falls—carrying a woman on his back, cooking a meal and eating it, and crossing with his feet encased in blankets—all on a tight rope strung across the great cataract.

ANOTHER BIG WEEK ASSURED DALY CITY THEATRE PATRONS

The Daly City Theatre has another big week of stage and screen attractions on tap for the theatre-goers of this district that will please the most exacting, when they start off with a bang with "Domestic Meddlers," the feature attraction on tonight's big program. On the stage Dumbell will present his Country Store and a big vaudeville bill in conjunction.

For Saturday there will be two big feature film attractions and the Silver Nite for the ladies, together with the special serial film and the candy for the kiddies at the matinee. Ranger, the dog star, will hold the top spot on the Saturday bill in his latest thrill picture, "Fangs of the Wild," with Syd Chaplin in his latest comedy "Skirts," as the second feature play. Every lady who purchases an admission ticket Saturday night will be presented with one piece of silverware absolutely free. This time, it is a lovely silver tea-spoon. At the Saturday matinee, in addition to the above features, there will be episode two of the serial "The Fatal Warning," a comedy, "Wedded Blisters," and the Love Nest Candy Bars.

Sunday will be a gala day at the Daly City Theatre, when "Skyrocket" Bill Connors will step into the cast of the George X. White Players, in the second comedy role. That means riot up and down your funnybone, for with "Snooky" and Bill together there will be no end of real fun. Don't forget, folks, "Snooky" White, that spasm of joy, and Bill Connors, that Happie Chappie, together on the same bill, with the George X. White Musical Comedy stars. The picture play, "Unknown Treasures," stars Bobby Agnew and Gladys Hulette, and it is spooky and thrilly to the last degree. On the same bill the Daly City will present Bobby Vernon in a riotously funny comedy special, called "Why Gorillas Leave Home." A Pathe Revue, Hodge Podge and News will round out one of the most evenly balanced bills of the season.

For Monday, the Daly City will present Emil Jannings, America's greatest dramatic star, in "The Patriot," one of the finest pieces of dramatic action ever presented on the screen. This masterful production was directed by Ernest Lubitsch, and has as supporting players Florence Vidor, Lewis Stone and Neil Hamilton. On the same bill there will be an educational comedy, "Playful Papas," and the Kinogram News reel.

John Gilbert will be the star of "Four Walls," Tuesday's feature attraction.

Wednesday is Firemen's night, with a massive vaudeville and feature picture show. There will be two performances, starting promptly at 7 and 9 p. m.

For Thursday the Daly City Theatre will present Alice Day, Ethel Clayton and Theodore Von Eltz in "His New York Wife," a thrilling drama of the gay white way, together with the ever popular Pillow Night.

3-7-77 AND THE VIGILANTE TRAIL

The renowned vigilantes of California, whose by-laws contained the following ominous and foreboding warning, "the only punishment that shall be inflicted by this Committee is Death," and whose strict adherence to that principle terminated a period of extreme outlawry during the days of '49, has left its imprint in Montana, where a kindred body satisfactorily dealt with its similar problem of "bad men."

The motorist in Southwestern Montana, states the National Automobile Club, becomes aware of the figures 3-7-77 imprinted on all road signs and markers designating the Vigilante Trail. "What do those figures mean?" is the query of motoring strangers. The answers tendered by the natives of this region are innumerable. The true meaning of these figures is offered in so many conflicting stories and suppositions that their significance is seriously doubted. The following explanation seems to hold weight as being the most probable theory of their origin.

The founder of the original organization of vigilantes in California, Mr. William T. Colman, was officially designated as No. 1. All orders issued by him were final and were strictly obeyed. Each new member was consecutively numbered and under this system it so happened that numbers 3, 7 and 77 held posts of authority which made these certain numerals stand forth as being symbolic of the law of the organization. The import of these numerals spread throughout the mining camps, and to wherever outlawry might be encountered. It is quite possible that the new organization of vigilantes in Montana took this symbol as a most potent means of instilling fear and respect of their purpose into the hearts of all desperados. The route traveled by that self-appointed body of law makers and law upholders, in their crusade against the "bad men" of the '80's, is today marked by the symbol 3-7-77.

Congress has a "Joint Committee on the Disposition of Useless Papers." To which might be referred the first ten amendments to the Constitution, commonly known as the Bill of Rights.

OVERSEA TELEPHONE CARRIES RACE STORY

For the first time in history an English horse race has been described to racing enthusiasts in this country while the race was actually being run. There was, of course, tremendous interest in Baltimore over the finish of the Grand National at Aintree, outside of Liverpool, England, because of the fact that Billy Barton, who ran second to Tipperary Tim, a 100 to 1 shot, was a Baltimore horse. Accordingly it was arranged to have the finish of the race described over the Trans-Atlantic telephone to race followers in Baltimore, and for ten minutes the connection was held open for this vocal description of the finish, the description over the telephone coming to Baltimore less than one-fifth of a second after the actual event ended.

In the 8th round of a prize-fight in Sydney, Australia, Norman Gillespie had Jack Roberts almost bested. Then Gillespie thought he heard the gong and dropped his arms to his side. Roberts smashed his defenseless opponent, knocking him out. What Gillespie had really heard was a telephone bell near the ringside.

Suddenly, out of a spring sky...

ALL was well on the telephone front on April 27, 1928. Suddenly, out of a spring sky, rain began to fall, and as night came on this turned into a furious storm of sleet, snow and wind. In 48 hours, 3700 telephone poles and 7000 miles of wire were down; 39 exchanges were isolated; 11,000 telephones were silent.

Repair crews were instantly sent to the scene. In record time 1000 men from five states were on the job. Within 72 hours the isolated exchanges and telephones were back in service.

In any crisis there are no state lines in the Bell System. In all emergencies of flood or storm, as well as in the daily tasks of extending and maintaining the nation-wide network, is seen the wisdom of One Policy, One System, Universal Service.
